Resolution adopted to save money on jail debt service

Funding released so construction can begin

BY BOB DEMAREE

Just hours after funds were released from the sale of the bonds to construct a new Jefferson County Sheriff and Justice Center, Jefferson County Commissioners adopted a resolution they claim should save taxpayers as much as $1 million in interest on the jail debt.

Commissioner David Bramer said at Thursday's meeting the county will save money on accrual of the capitalized interest through a mechanism that provides for a lease with the Jefferson County Jail Building Corporation on the current jail and the land where the new jail will be built.

Bramer said the maneuver could save the county as much as $1 million in interest.

The Commissioners approved the resolution on the recommendation of the county's bond attorneys from Barnes and Thornburg of Indianapolis, which has been advising the Commissioners on the jail project.

Bramer said money from the bonds was released earlier on Thursday. The more

All of Southern Indiana back in the 'Blue'

BY BOB DEMAREE

COVID-19 statistics throughout southern Indiana are continuing to improve with all of southern Indiana now back in the "Blue" with low community spread. In fact, only seven counties in the state remain under a "Yellow" advisory for moderate community spread.

Earlier this week, Switzerland County moved from "Yellow" and officially back to "Blue." Owen County, located about 70 miles southwest of Indianapolis, is the most southern "Yellow" county in the state with the other six — Boone, Clinton, Fulton, Montgomery, Newton and White counties north of Indianapolis in the western part of the state.

In Jefferson County, 13,597 have been fully vaccinated (about 42% of the county's population) with 13,225 receiving the first of a two-dose series. The Jefferson County Health Department wrapped up its second week of mobile vaccination clinics on Friday and continues to provide the vaccine at its building at 715 Green Road with no appointment required.

Jefferson County has had a total of 3,358 confirmed positive cases of COVID-19, an increase of two in the last two days. The total deaths in Jefferson County during the pandemic is 85. The county's current seven-day average positivity rate is 2.8% and the seven-day positivity for unique individuals is 7.5%.

Switzerland County has 2,416 fully vaccinated (about 22.6% of the county's population) with 2,346 receiving the first of a two-dose series. Switzerland County has had a total of 813 positive cases during the pandemic, an increase of three over the last two days. The total deaths during the pandemic in Switzerland County remains at 8. The county's current seven-day average positivity rate is 3% and the seven-day positivity for unique individuals is 16.7%.

In Indiana, 2,725,903 have been fully vaccinated with 2,750,695 receiving the first of a two-dose series. The Indiana Department of Health announced Friday that 218 additional Hoosiers have been diagnosed with COVID-19, bringing the total to 750,702 the number of Indiana residents now known to have had the novel coronavirus. To date, 13,346 Hoosiers are confirmed to have died from COVID-19, an increase of two from the previous day.

In Carroll County, there have been a total of 21 deaths attributed to the pandemic. There have been 1,037 cases of COVID-19 in Carroll County during the pandemic. The incidence rate in Carroll County is at "Yellow" with 5.4% for community spread.

In information from the North Central District Health Department, Trimble County has reported 732 cases of COVID-19 with four active cases and overall seven deaths during the pandemic. The incidence rate in Trimble County is now at "Yellow" at 5.1% for community spread.

City Hall closed Monday in observance of Juneteenth

BY COURIER STAFF REPORT

Madison City Hall will be closed Monday, June 21, in observance of Juneteenth, the new federal holiday signed into law Thursday, but city trash and recycling services will continue as scheduled.

Juneteenth celebrates the events of June 19, 1865, when Union soldiers brought the news of freedom to enslaved Black people in Galveston, Texas, some 2 1/2 years after President Abraham Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation had freed slaves in Southern states.

Although City Hall will be closed, other services will continue because the sudden adoption of the holiday left little time for rescheduling. City employees who work Monday, will be paid for the holiday.

Meanwhile, the Board of Public Works and Safety, previously scheduled for that day, has been moved to Wednesday, June 23, at 11:30 a.m.

The Jefferson County Courthouse and Hanover Town Hall decided later on Friday to both be closed Monday.

Regatta puts out call to round up more volunteers

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

As the Madison Regatta & Roostertail Music Festival nears race week, the organization is still in need of volunteers to work its Fourth of July weekend boat race and music festival.

Madison Regatta Vice-President Jak McCormick said that there are still openings for volunteers in the pits, along the riverfront and everywhere in between.

"We still need volunteers and if you want to help, give us a call," McCormick said. "We can fit people in pretty much anywhere."

The all-volunteer organization has been playing from behind since it decided in April that pandemic conditions were suitable to hold the event after canceling everything last year due to COVID-19. Volunteers staff every aspect of the event with the exception of security and vendors.

WANT TO VOLUNTEER?

Anybody interested in helping can contact the Madison Regatta at 812-274-4112 or visit the Regatta website at www.madisonregatta.com.

Anybody interested in helping can contact the Madison Regatta at 812-274-4112 or visit the Regatta website at www.madisonregatta.com.

In addition to a call for volunteers, McCormick said the Regatta is seeking one or two more ski boats and two or three more pontoon boats to help with the race. If interested, contact the Regatta at the outlets above.

Wristband and VIP sales continue at a strong pace, both online and in person. The organization is currently sold out of golf cart passes. Online admission sales will end June 25. Tickets are currently $40 and include both the racing and music. After June 26, the cost goes up to $50 but still includes both venues.

A meeting for all groups that are manning entry gates will be held at the Madison Regatta office on Vaughn Drive at 6 p.m. on Thursday, June 24. All groups must have a representative in attendance.

The next general membership meeting of the Madison Regatta will be held at The Boneyard Grill at 7 p.m. on Wednesday, June 23.

Donors needed for blood shortage

The American Red Cross is experiencing a severe blood shortage as the number of trauma cases, organ transplants and elective surgeries rise — and deplete the nation's blood inventory. Donors of all blood types — especially type O — are urged to make an appointment to give as soon as possible to prevent further impact to patients.

Right now, hospitals are responding to an atypically high number of traumas and emergency room visits, as well as overdoses and resulting transplants. In comparison to 2019, the Red Cross has seen demand from trauma centers climb by 10% in 2021– more than five times the growth of other facilities that provide blood transfusions.

Schedule an appointment to give blood now by using the Red Cross Blood Donor App, visiting RedCrossBlood.org or calling 1-800-RED CROSS (1-800-733-2767).

In most cases, those who have received a COVID-19 vaccine can donate.

As more than a third of Americans have become fully vaccinated against COVID-19, the Red Cross is winding down COVID-19 antibody testing for blood, platelet and plasma donations. Through June 25, the Red Cross is testing all donations for COVID-19 antibodies. Testing may show possible exposure to the virus or whether a donor has developed an immune response to vaccination.

WISDOM

Kitchen downtown. I've got four brothers, Johnny and Patrick Knight, and Tyler and Conor MacNamara.

I wouldn't be who I am if I had grown up anywhere else. There were so many talented, generous, and patient teachers, and I soaked it all in.

What was your path to a musical life?

I first picked up the guitar when I was 7. My second grade teacher, Judy Collins, taught me to play my first chords in a class at Girl's Inc. When I was 14 I started taking guitar lessons from Jimmy Davis.

Kathy Sego was the choir director at Pope John at the time and she urged me to keep singing and performing through middle school. Later, Cheryl Clarke inspired me to start writing and performing my own songs. I wrote my first song on guitar at 15.

I would go to the shows that Scott Ruby organized at the Jaycees club building, and that's how I got involved in playing in high school. Then Daniel Gruner, Roy Gentry, Caleb Mechem, Beejay Elles, and I started organizing weekly open mics at restaurants, coffee shops, bars, and outdoor spaces around town. Daniel, Caleb, and Bryan Alcorn helped me record my first album in Bryan's barn over one winter break. Daniel set up my first tour through the east coast, south, and midwest when I was 17, and I fell in love with touring.

Well, we've been shut down due to COVID, like all bands, but I'm anxious to get touring again. I'm living in Philly right now but will be moving back to New York City soon to resume recording and get things going again.

Has the Madison music scene changed since you were part of it?

It seems like there is more focus on creating events that are inclusive for all ages, and I think that's critical if we want creative young people to be able to contribute and build community and a sense of belonging here in Madison. I'd like to see more of that.

I know people are working to help Madison become known as Indiana's Music City. I think a special grant program for creative pursuits would be a great idea, and would set Madison apart from other towns and cities in the state — even well-known musical towns like Bloomington.

What would you say to other aspiring young musicians or songwriters here in Madison? Any advice?

Seek out new and different music, even stuff you may not like. You're more likely to learn something unusual or unexpected if you're listening to different music than what you're comfortable with.

Save up for a mic and a bit of equipment and learn to record at home. Most great artists and bands record themselves, even if it's just demos, and plenty of amazing albums were made at home with minimal equipment.

Do you want to get better? You have to practice. Every day if you're serious.

Never apologize when you're on stage. If set-up is taking a long time, if you broke a string, if you forgot a lyric, if your hands are shaking so much you can't play the chord, if you've got a huge pimple — it doesn't matter how embarrassed you feel — don't apologize. Remember, you're up there because you rock.

On that note, a good alternative to "I'm sorry" can be "thank you." Thank your audience and everyone who helped to make the show possible — bookers, sound people, light people, door people, bouncers, bartenders, waiters, bussers, etc. — and always your band.

Be yourself — It's infinitely cooler and less complicated to be a dork than it is to be a dork pretending to be cool.

Be curious, be brave, and have fun!

HOT TIP OF THE WEEK

Tonight the Jordan Wilson Coalition trio will be on the Mad Paddle patio. Jordan has done a number of solo shows recently, but seeing him with the band is a whole 'nother level of fun. The Electric Lady was rocking once again on Friday night with Edgar Red performing. The Electric Lady has a long history as one of Madison's great live venues, but it hasn't been open to the public in years. It's great to relive the "Lady" magic. Also, Thomas Family Winery had live music Friday, too, something that almost never happens..

Charlie Rohlfing is a retired advertising man and partner in The Red Bicycle Hall music venue. Look for his distinctive fedora bobbing above the crowd, anywhere live local music is happening.

Proposals sought for boosting regional development funds

BY THE MADISON COURIER

The Regional Economic Acceleration Development Initiative (READI) program was created in the state's biennial budget during this year's legislative session and signed into law by Gov. Eric Holcomb.

The Our Southern Indiana Regional Development Authority has issued a call for projects for communities and nonprofits to participate in the Regional Economic Acceleration Development Initiative (READI) program.

The Call for Projects is officially open and available to all communities and nonprofits within and surrounding the region which includes the counties of Clark, Floyd, Jefferson, Scott and Washington. Communities and nonprofits are being asked to collaborate with others to submit projects that will have a regional impact.

Chair Dana Huber said, "This is a once in a generation opportunity for our region to receive a much-needed economic catalyst," she continued. "To receive project funding of this magnitude we must work together and submit the best regional development plan as possible."

Huber said, "The RDA is asking for communities to think outside of the box, be bold, when developing their projects and working on their application. We also want to see project collaboration both inside and outside of the RDA region." She said "submitted projects should emphasize on their regional impact and sustainability."

Huber and the other four members of the Our Southern Indiana Regional Development Authority board: Ken Rush of Floyd County, Kevin Kellems of Jefferson County, Steve Meyer of Scott County, and John Jones of Washington County will be reviewing the applications and intend to include a project list within the submitted Regional Development Plan on Aug. 31.

The READI program was created in the state's biennial budget during this year's legislative session and signed into law by Gov. Eric Holcomb. The budget allocated $500 million directly to the Indiana Economic Development Corporation (IEDC) to implement and oversee the program. Currently, the IEDC is looking for regions to collaborate and apply for the available funding. The maximum funding that a region may receive is $50 million.

The Call for Project submission form, located on OurSIRDA's website (https://oursoinrda.org), and ancillary materials are due July 20 at 5 pm. "We know this is a short timeline for our communities," Huber said, "but this will ensure that the board members have time to review and grade all submissions based on the published score card. This also allows for us to follow up with submissions to ensure we fully understand the projects."

After the board members have had time to review the submissions, they will select a list of projects to include into the Regional Development Plan. Public support of the plan, along with endorsements and approvals, will be solicited during August before being submitted to the IEDC. Once a region submits their Regional Development Plan, it may be requested to present to a selection committee in the fall. The current timeline states that if awarded, the RDA will receive notice in December.

Insurer Allianz surveyed women in 2019 found that 67% of female survey respondents reported worrying about their current financial situation versus 57% of males interviewed. A majority of those (81%) reported having a lot of stress when thinking about retirement planning. This survey and others like it have brought some issues to light.

Women are typically more concerned about risking their nest eggs than their male counterparts. Risk aversion, especially in the productive earning years of a woman's life, can mean that she won't accumulate enough savings to last her through her retirement years.

In the US, the typical woman reaches her peak earnings at the age of 44. At that time, she will be earning, on average, $66,700, according to Payscale.com. If you are a woman planning to retire, what steps can you take to ensure that you don't run out of money when it's time to retire? What can you do to lessen the stress you feel when you think about money?

Have a money chat (or chats) with your spouse or partner. If you are married, engaged, or in a committed relationship, you should discuss your concerns about finances.

This talk should not be a forum for judgments or accusations about earnings or spending habits.

Instead, use this time to discuss your and your partner's attitudes toward saving, debt, retirement, and other key money issues. Talk about how your backgrounds helped shape those attitudes and how you can use your strengths and weaknesses to create more financial peace.

Become more money-savvy. Sadly, many Americans lack the basic financial literacy needed to make optimum money decisions. Fortunately, as the problem of financial illiteracy has entered mainstream consciousness, online courses and videos (many are free!) have popped up. Take advantage of these and others offered by your workplace, college, or financial advisor.

Keep a daily log of expenses. If you find yourself saying, "Wow! What happened to my paycheck?" It might be time to start writing down your daily, weekly, and monthly expenses. Much as it does for dieting and exercising, journaling creates a deeper awareness and can emotionally connect you to your money in a way that leads to better habits. You'll begin to see patterns and weaknesses and can address those more effectively. Plus, you will discover "fat" that you can trim and use to grow your retirement accounts. As financial literacy expert Christine Luken points out, it takes just $24.70 a day in unnecessary spending to add up to $10,000 for the year!

Practice diligent self-care. So, what does taking care of your physical, spiritual, and mental well-being have to do with money management and retirement planning? EVERYTHING! The links between your financial well-being and the rest of you are well-established by psychologists. For one thing, taking care of your body and mind can help you work longer if you want to do so. When you feel in shape, you will be more inclined to tackle the tasks associated with money management and retirement planning. You will also find more energy to work side gigs to make extra money, participate in social activities, or spend time with friends and family.

Establish a contingency fund. Emergencies happen to even the most well-planned, money-wise individuals. A few months of cash stashed away to see you through the unexpected helps you achieve a sense of well-being. An established emergency fund can rid you of the anxiety your brain creates around uncertainty.

Lose the black cloud of debt. One of the most common things contributing to money stress is having a lot of high-interest consumer debt. Imagine how much money you'll free up when you make a concerted effort to reduce this debt.

Think about retirement NOW. It is never too early to think about retirement and consider using professional services No matter what stage of your economic life you are in, it's always good to find a guide for money matters.

There are many more ways women can enhance their futures by regaining control of their money. Be Informed!

To tell or not to tell

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: My former spouse, "Ted," was extremely abusive — not physically but emotionally, psychologically and financially. He is good at it, and his victims are like a frog in a hot pot. Ted breaks you down so gradually, slowly grooming you to question your perceptions of everything. I've noticed Ted likes to pick women who maybe already have some struggles with self-esteem or depression, or who drink too much. (I drank too much when we were dating, though I quit drinking the year I married him.) He is controlling, malicious and vindictive. Yet, comes across as humble and sweet.

His routine goes like this: First, he charms you. Then he tells you how mean his ex was to him, and you feel bad for him. Then he gets you to start a business with him, and to co-sign a loan for his "work truck." He ended up leaving me with $300,000 in debt. I later found out he'd left his two previous girlfriends with $100,00 in debt.

Now he is dating a lovely woman. He's gotten her to the truck-purchasing phase, and she is planning to move in with him in July. She is here from another country and has worked hard to save for her retirement. He is going to leave her with nothing. I have a young child with him (shared custody), so I see him and her fairly regularly. I really want to give her a warning, but he is great at triangulation and would probably make me out to be crazy or something. Also, he never lets her talk to me for more than a moment. What should I do? — Troubled in Midwest

Dear Troubled: I'm sorry that Ted put you through that, and it's commendable you want to help his latest target. Some lessons have to be learned the hard way, but you can still try to give her the CliffsNotes. Write a letter letting her know that you've noticed some patterns emerging in her relationship with Ted, patterns that were also present in your marriage and caused you great emotional pain and financial hardship. Stick to the facts, and keep as neutral a tone as possible.

There's a good chance she'll shrug it off and throw it out, or show it to Ted, who will have a pat explanation for everything, I'm sure. But at least you'll know you tried.

Dear Annie: To "My Own Mrs. Robinson," who said his marriage was great and the problem was his mother-in-law, with whom he was sleeping: Your mother-in-law isn't the problem. It's your shameful lack of honor and morals. The humiliation your young wife is about to experience will likely last a lifetime and this is exactly what you wanted since sex was more important to you than the devastating harm you were willing to inflict.

To the young wife:

1. This is not your fault.

2. Immediately contact a divorce attorney.

3. If OKed by the attorney, change the locks on the house and put his belongings on the front sidewalk.

5. Say no more than five words to your disgraceful mother: "Do not ever contact me again." How I wish I could put my arms around this young wife and comfort her. — K.S.

Dear K.S.: A lot of people wrote in about that letter, with a few suggesting that "MOMR" must have been pulling my leg because it was so outrageous. I really hope so. Otherwise, that poor wife is about to be handed a lifetime's worth of baggage. Thanks for your letter.

Lessons from Dad

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Readers: A few weeks ago, I asked you to share the most valuable trait that a dad (or dad figure) instilled in you. Hundreds of you were thrilled to write in about that prompt. Below is just a small sampling. Happy Father's Day.

Dear Annie: The most valuable trait my dad instilled in us was love and respect for one's partner. All I ever saw between my mom and him was love. I never saw or heard them argue, even though I know they occasionally did, but they never argued in front of their kids. They were married 53 years when my dad passed away.

My older brother and his wife celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary in 2019, and my wife and I will celebrate our 50th anniversary in 2022. I guess this says something. — Keith B.

Dear Annie: My dad was a Philadelphia banker, and integrity was his telltale trait. As a young man, he delivered groceries on a horse and wagon and earned a reputation for caring for all his clients. He saved all his tips to put himself through college. As a grown man, he found a bag full of money and immediately searched for and found its owner. As a retired man, he noticed that the widows in his social group were ignored after their husbands died, and he introduced a plan to include them. Integrity is a trait that shines through the years. — Nancy R.

Dear Annie: My Uncle Bob was the greatest "Dad" I could have been blessed with. He and my aunt were there for me growing up. The most valuable trait he passed on to me was the ability to love unconditionally by caring about the whole person. He loved me my entire life, warts and all, and taught me to do the same for others. He never judged me and was always there to offer a listening ear and a ready hug. I like to think I am who I am as a person because of him. — Merrie N.

Dear Annie: The most valuable lesson my dad instilled in me was a love of learning. At age 50, he went back to college to become a quality control engineer. He did this so he could find work close to home, and the short commute gave him time to help us with our homework every night. He was the only one who had the patience to teach me higher math. I have a learning disorder, but he never let me use that as an excuse to get out of college-bound classes. I ended up going to the same college where he had done his retraining. I was desperate to quit at times, but if my dad didn't give up despite the cold and the difficult material, how could I? I ended up graduating with honors. The accomplishment belongs to both of us. — Lisa E.

Dear Annie: My wonderful father taught me to be calm in the face of challenges, and he taught me to fish. He showed me that fishing wasn't always about catching fish; it was often quiet time on a beautiful river, time with good friends and a way to recharge his batteries. He's been gone more than 20 years. I still think of him every day. — Love My Dad than $43 million jail project is now fully funded, and contracts can be awarded to the lowest bidders — EH Construction, Shepherdsviile, Kentucky, for general trades and site work; Hussung Mechanical, Louisville, for the mechanical package; Link Electrical, Louisville, for the electrical package, and C&T Design and Equipment, Indianapolis, for the food service package — so that construction can begin.

In other business:

• Bramer discussed the Regional Economic Acceleration and Development Initiative (READI) in which regions can be awarded up to $50 million for implementation of their regional development plans. He said Jefferson County needs to consider in the next two weeks plans to submit to the Our Southern Indiana Regional Development Authority by its July 20 deadline. A couple of suggestions he offered were a sewer district or the consideration of additional uses for the airport that could have an impact regionally. Bramer said the county also needs to consider the best uses for the $6.2 million the county will receive through the American Rescue Act.

• Court Services Executive Director Amber Finnegan received approval to apply for several Community Corrections and Justice Reinvestment grants that provide critical funding to the courts for salaries and more. Finnegan anticipates the county should be awarded the grants. They include Community Corrections for $685,215 to pay or 11 full-time staff members and their benefits; Drug Court Grant for $51,013 to pay salary and benefits for one case manager, and training; Pretrial Services for $54,413 to pay salary and benefits for one case manager; Prosecutor Diversion Program for $59,409 to pay salary and benefits for one case manager; and Jail Treatment for $30,000 to pay for jail therapy and group facilitation through LifeSpring Health Systems.

• Hanover Town Council President Kenny Garrett asked the Commissioners to allocate $10,000 for the Hanover Parks and $7,500 for the Hanover Senior Citizens as the Commissioners prepare their 2022 budget that they will submit to the County Council. Garrett said Hanover is working to ensure it provides activities for both youth and seniors. "We try to keep it balanced the best we can," Garrett said, adding he appreciates whatever support the county can provide. "Anything you can do for us is a positive."

• Gave permission to Emergency Management Agency Director Troy Morgan to change the county's mass notification alert company from Nixle to Rave Mobile Safety. Morgan said he began considering the change after there was a failure with the county's system. He said the Rave program is "more up-to-date, more user friendly and more stable" for nearly the same cost. Rave is $7,300 per year, just $400 higher than Nixle charges annually for the service.

• Morgan said the dedication of the Jefferson County Public Safety Center, 620 Green Road, will be Saturday, July 31, at 10 a.m. He noted the county has been utilizing the building since early 2020, but the ceremony has been delayed due to COVID-19.

• Awarded bids for work on the Jefferson County Health Department building to Kinsinger's Custom Windows at $23,012.90 for windows, Glass Unlimited of Madison at $9,697 for aluminum doors, and American Seamless Gutters at $1,580 for gutters. JCHD Administrator Tammy Monroe had reported to the Commissioners at their last meeting about the poor condition of windows, doors and gutters of the 30-year old building, and that they needed to be replaced.

• County Surveyor Mike Pittman received permission to seek bids for mowing and other cleanup in areas where there are violations of the county's nuisance ordinance.

• Pittman reported that bids had been received for surveying 35 cornerstones in Jefferson County, but the bids are being taken under advisement because they were received in different forms with some bids priced by each cornerstone while another was based on hourly rate.

• Heard from Devon Danner, 376 East 350N, asking for assistance in regulating traffic on County Road 350N between Michigan Road and US 421 for speeders and larger trucks. "There's a lot of traffic on the road," Danner said. "It's not built for semis."

Bramer said the county will work toward ensuring there are weight limit and speed limit signs on the road.

MADISON COURIER BOYS TRACK & FIELD ATHLETE OF THE YEAR

Mother's advice leads to stellar career for Trimble's Long

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

Mothers always know best.

Ryan Long had always played baseball but when got to sixth grade, his mother Karen suggested that he should look at another sport that he had never even considered.

"My mom told me, 'You're fast. Why don't you try track?' " Long smiled. "I had been playing baseball in the spring so I thought I would give it a shot."

Karen Long was right. By the time Ryan was in seventh grade, he was winning events at the high school level. As a sophomore, he brought home the KHSAA Class 1A State Championship in the 100-meter dash. Ryan's hopes at two state titles were dashed this year with a pair of close second-place finishes but he was still an easy choice as The Madison Courier's Boys Track & Field Athlete of the Year.

By any definition, Long had a masterful senior season. Both of his near-misses to Fort Knox sprinter Malik Blunt came by a combined .23 seconds, just .11 in the 100 dash and .12 in the 200 dash. His time of 10.95 in the 100 was the ninth-fastest in Kentucky regardless of class and would have been eighth-fastest in Indiana. His time of 21.85 in the 200 was the 11th-fastest overall in Kentucky but would have been third overall in Indiana. It is also ranks in the top 50 in the history of the state.

In addition to his two runner-up finishes in the sprints, Long also earned a fourth place in the 800-meter relay along with Corbin Ginn, Damien Johnson and Ricky Gray and a seventh in the 1600 relay with Gray, Jessup Smith and Matthew Craig that set a new school record on 3:38.77.

While running fast comes naturally to Long, he is not one to rest on mere talent. He takes the sport seriously and spends hours honing his craft.

"For Ryan, it's definitely a matter of his work ethic and his dedication," Trimble coach Stuart Barnes said. "After he won the state championship his sophomore year, he asked me when we could get in the weight room. I told him that since I was coaching football, it would have to be in the morning before school. So for two years, we got to the school at 6:30 a.m. every morning and then did running when the track season came around. To have that kind of work ethic from somebody who has already won a state championship, shows you just what kind of work ethic he has."

Like everybody else, Long lost his junior season to the COVID-19 pandemic, cutting short what was already a special high school career. He said the year off definitely affected the early part of this season.

"The beginning of the year started off really slow. I just had to get back into it after having a year off," said Long, who also was a two-year starter with the boys basketball team. "I put down some decent times and then the Scott County meet (in late April) I laid down the first really good time of the season and it took off from there."

With high school now officially over, Long can look ahead to college where he has committed to run at the University of the Cumberlands in Williamsburg, Kentucky, in the fall. He's excited to see what happens when he gets to the next level.

"I had some big schools offer me and want me to run with them, but I saw Cumberlands as a chance to push me and to really help me get those better times," Long said. "They've had successful teams and I'm excited."

Mahle fans 12, Reds silence Brewers' bats again in 2-1 win

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MILWAUKEE — Tyler Mahle tied his career high with 12 strikeouts, Tucker Barnhart drove in the go-ahead run with a double in the seventh inning, and the Cincinnati Reds beat the Milwaukee Brewers, 2-1, on Wednesday to finish a three-game sweep.

Cincinnati has won six straight and 11 of 13. The Brewers dropped three straight for the first time in nearly a month and were swept for the third time this season. Milwaukee totaled nine hits and four runs in the series against the Reds.

Mahle (7-2) allowed three hits and a pair of walks over six innings as he surpassed the 10-strikeout mark for the first time this season and fifth of his career. Brad Brach, Sean Doolittle and Lucas Sims completed the five-hitter, with Sims getting the last four outs for his seventh save.

"It's been the whole team," Mahle said. "The starters have been doing great, the bullpen has been doing great and the offense has been doing a great job all season."

The Brewers scored their lone run in the third when Chirstian Yelich drove in Daniel Vogelbach with a single to right.

Milwaukee's Freddy Peralta (6-2) struck out six over six innings without walking a batter. He gave up five hits, the first a two-out single by Nick Castellanos in the fourth. Tyler Naquin followed with a double to left, scoring Castellanos.

Peralta retired his first two batters in the seventh before Joey Votto reached on a single. Votto scored the go-ahead run on Barnhart's 14th double of the season.

"It was fun," Barnhart said "What a fun game to be a part of. I'm proud of everybody, all series long."

The Reds were hardly overwhelming at the plate. After winning 2-1 on Tuesday night with just two hits, they totaled six hits on Wednesday.

Barnhart told Votto before the start of the seventh to be ready to score if he was on base when Barnhart came up.

"The second I got to first base, I knew I had to be ready to score because my man called it," Votto said. "That was a big hit in a big spot and I had to score."

The veteran first baseman emphatically pumped his fist before making his way back to the dugout, where his teammates were just as fired up after seeing him score from first.

"Joey is the heartbeat of this team," Barnhart said. "Seeing him fired up like that is awesome."

On Thursday, the first sellout crowd at Petco Park since 2019 was treated to Fernando Tatis Jr.'s electrifying solo home run in the sixth inning and Victor Caratini's game-winning, two-run shot in the ninth.

In between, Manny Machado and Eric Hosmer also homered for the Padres, who recovered from closer Mark Melancon's blown save in Cincinnati's four-run ninth to take a 6-4 thriller against the Reds.

Caratini homered two batters after Eric Hosmer hit a tying, two-run homer in the ninth, a crazy finish on a night when the Padres, who made the playoffs last year after a 13-year drought, celebrated the ballpark returning to full capacity following the state's reopening plan that went into effect Tuesday.

But the Padres had to work for this one after the Reds rallied for four runs in the ninth against Melancon, including a go-ahead, two-run homer by rookie Jonathan India.

Machado drew a leadoff walk against Ryan Hendrix and Hosmer homered with one out. Amir Garrett (0-2) came on and allowed Jake Cronenworth's single and then Caratini's shot into the left-field seats. It was Hosmer's sixth homer and Caratini's fifth.

The Padres won for just the second time in nine games. They were coming off a 1-5 trip to New York and Colorado, including a three-game sweep by the Rockies, that Tingler described as "just terrible."

The Padres took a 2-0 lead into the ninth after Tatis and Machado homered off Wade Miley. Melancon was one out away from his big league-leading 20th save before he melted down against the red-hot Reds.

Joey Votto started the Reds' rally with a leadoff single and Tucker Barnhart doubled. Kyle Farmer had an RBI groundout before pinch-hitter Tyler Stephenson tied it with a two-out single.

India homered to give the Reds a 4-2 lead and quiet the crowd. It was his sixth.

Pierce Johnson (2-2) got the win.

Miley, who threw his first career no-hitter at Cleveland on May 7, had frustrated the struggling Padres until Tatis drove a high-arcing shot that just cleared the wall in left-center for San Diego's first hit with two outs in the sixth.

BY MICHAEL MAROT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

Jeff Gordon smiles before taking a few laps in a midget car on Thursday at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

INDIANAPOLIS — Just a few miles from the home where he spent his teenage years, Jeff Gordon strapped himself into a midget car, was pushed onto the 1/4-mile dirt track in the third turn at Indianapolis Motor Speedway and started turning laps.

He felt like a kid again.

"I did this 30 years ago and it's hard to believe it's been that long and to get back in there, it felt unreal," he said Thursday. "Now I want more water on the track, I want to go fast. It's just such a cool car, it takes me back to the time when I was racing midgets and how much I loved them . To be able to slide these cars around and maneuver them on these little bull rings, that was way overdue."

Clearly, the 48-year-old, four-time NASCAR Cup Series champion remains passionate about racing even if he is sporting a new look. The winner of a record five Brickyard 400s arrived this time in a red, white and blue fire suit and graying temples while driving a No. 4 car, a throwback to his USAC midget championship days.

This was never about rumors Gordon might leave the broadcast booth, the possibility of another comeback or even the desire of IndyCar fans to see Gordon run in the Indianapolis 500.

Instead, Gordon came back to promote this year's BC39 card, scheduled for Aug. 18-19.

The two-day event is named in honor of Bryan Clauson, a dirt track specialist who died at 27 from injuries sustained in a midget car crash in Kansas in August 2016. It's sponsored by Driven2Save Lives, an Indiana group that promotes organ donation.

"I just think instead of the Brickyard being on the oval, the road course, I think they should just bring it over here. I might even come back for that," Gordon joked. "This whole thing is for a great cause, for Bryan Clauson and his memory and being an organ donor and truly saving lives."

Gordon posed for photos with speedway employees and his mother, speedway president Doug Boles and Clauson's father, Tim. Then a small tractor pushed Gordon onto the track and with an assist from a pickup truck, he took his first dirt-track laps in almost 25 years.

It didn't Gordon long to rev up the engines and sending dirt chunks flying toward the concrete wall inside the track he dreamed about as a teen. And this time, he was simply having the time of his life.

"I've not had many bad days in Indianapolis, but this is going to go towards the top," he said. "From my first time racing here, the Brickyard 400, of course the wins are memorable and the F1 swap and then this right up there with them. I'm so thankful to Doug Boles and Tim Clauson for talking me into doing this. I've put it off for way too long. That was the most fun I've had in a long time."

'Mr. Mickelson, trouble calling on Line 1' at U.S. Open

JIM LITKE
ASSOCIATED PRESS

By mid-afternoon, cell phones throughout the 858 area code were buzzing.

And buzzing.

The third time one went off in the gallery behind him, Phil Mickelson stepped away from his tee shot at No. 13 — for the second time — and tried to keep the steam from blowing out of both ears.

"Seriously?" he pleaded. "Can we get someone to help him?

Turns out Lefty could have used some help himself. He sent the ensuing drive into some rough stuff left of the fairway, made bogey there and signed for a 4-over 75 in the opening round of the fog-delayed U.S. Open at Torrey Pines. That left him eight shots behind surprise leader Russell Henley — and co-leader if Louis Oosthuizen is still 4-under after playing the remaining two holes of his opening round Friday morning.

Henley admitted surprising even himself. The last time he played the South Course, at the Farmers Insurance Open in 2014, he was 8 over through the first 15 holes and missed the cut by six shots.

"I don't really remember," he said, "besides leaving the course feeling like I just got beat up."

A lot of players felt that way by day's end. Brooks Koepka was not among them. The two-time champion lived up to his "Big Game" nickname, posting a 2-under 69 that was his sixth straight round in the 60s at the major tournament billed annually as golf's toughest test.

"I think a lot of guys make it more difficult than it needs to be," Koepka said. "Just got to understand where the flag is, what you're doing and where to miss it."

That was decidedly easier for the golfers who drew morning tee times. Francesco Molinari and Rafa Cabrera Bella both managed to park 3-under 68s in the clubhouse before the winds picked up. By mid-afternoon, solid approach shots that landed just a few feet off-target wound up snarled in collars of thick rough ringing the greens or burrowed into sides of steep bunkers. Few of them handled the frustration with Koepka's equanimity.

Former U.S. Open champion Webb Simpson stumbled home with a 79, but only because he birdied the last hole. Jordan Spieth shot 77. For others players, even reaching the greens was no guarantee of safe harbor. Max Homa four-puttied from 20 feet for triple bogey on No. 12 and three-putted for a double on No. 14 en route to a 76.

"There's no tricks," said Molinari, whose pandemic-delayed reunion with twin brother, Edoardo (1 under), was a smashing success. "You need to grind and fight for 18 holes and then relax until tomorrow and start over again."

That will be easier for some rather than others. Defending champion Bryson DeChambeau had to play the final five holes in 2 under to salvage a 73. He won by overpowering Winged Foot last September, cutting corners with towering drives and carving short irons out of the rough.

Whether that style of play will be precise enough at Torrey Pines remains to be seen, but Rory McIlroy already sounded skeptical.

"I think as the course gets firmer, we just going to have to really dial it in," he said after birding the 18th for a 1-under 70. "You might have 170 (yards) to a pin, but you're really trying to land it like 160, 162. So it's really about being aware of how firm the course is getting. We'll just have to really concentrate on that."

Roughly 40 players will wind up within four shots of the lead by the time Round 1 wraps, hardly surprising for a U.S. Open, where pars still come at a premium. But those with morning tee times were a lot more optimistic about their chances of staying in contention.

"Well, I'm looking forward to it," said Jon Rahm, a pre-tournament favorite who shot 70 in the brisk afternoon winds. "Hopefully, it's a little bit more moist greens in the morning, like they had today and we'll be able to attack some of the pins, especially starting on the front nine.

"So hopefully, if it's not too windy, and the weather conditions were like they were this morning," he added, "we can get off to a good start and keep it going all day"

Hopefully.

Nashville Superspeedway welcomes Cup debut

BY JENNA FRYER
AP AUTO RACING WRITER

Erik Moses attended his first NASCAR race in 2019 as an XFL executive looking to poach marketing ideas during a trip to Dover International Raceway. One year later, Dover poached Moses and sent him to Tennessee to reopen Nashville Superspeedway.

Moses, hired last August, will open the gates this weekend for a track that had sat dormant since Carl Edwards won the 21st and final Xfinity Series race of the 2011 season.

Better yet, Moses will host a sold-out crowd Sunday of roughly 40,000 spectators when NASCAR's premier Cup Series makes its Nashville Superspeedway debut.

It will be a seminal moment for Dover Motorsports, which opened the concrete oval in 2001 seeking a coveted Cup race. After a decade of hosting only NASCAR's minor leagues and eight IndyCar races, the company gave up trying for the big show.

"We did not build this track in 2001 to host simply Trucks and Xfinity. It was built for Cup," Moses said in an interview with The Associated Press. "Why weren't we able to attract a Cup race for 20 years, frankly I don't know, and I don't care. My job is to ensure that this runway we have now introduces this marketplace to the best drivers in America and turns this facility into a beloved institution."

The Cup Series has not raced in the Nashville area since 1984 when Geoff Bodine won the last premier series event held at Nashville Fairgrounds Speedway. Its return comes as Nashville has become the hottest market in motorsports.

The city hosted the Cup Series annual awards ceremony in 2019 and NASCAR reintroduced itself to Nashville with an elaborate "Burnouts on Broadway" display in the heart of the entertainment district. IndyCar will return to the city in August for a street race that will cross the Korean War Veterans Memorial Bridge, and Speedway Motorsports is trying to bring NASCAR back to the Fairgrounds.

"It is pretty interesting how everybody is going to Nashville, honing in on Nashville as a great place to be, and I think it's a long time coming," said Dale Earnhardt Jr., who will be part of the broadcast team this weekend as NBC Sports begins its portion of the NASCAR television package. Earnhardt also recently joined the group backing the IndyCar event.

Is it too much racing for one market?

"Physically they are all different and are going to provide a different style of racing and a different style of entertainment," Earnhardt said. "The town does have a lot of energy. When we were there doing the burnout on the boulevard, I was upstairs in one of those buildings looking out the window watching and it was clear as day that this was a great relationship and a great partnership.

"It just felt normal, it didn't even feel new. It felt like an old friend and a buddy you hadn't hung out with in a long, long time."

Dover has made a substantial investment to finally land its Cup race. The company moved one of its two annual races from its Delaware track to get its Cup date and was rewarded with a four-year sanctioning agreement from NASCAR.

Dover pledged upwards of $8 million for capital improvements, which Moses said has included a massive fiber installation for wireless capability at the superspeedway, added SAFER barriers, a renovated luxury suite complex, infield care center and media center. New asphalt was also poured on the infield road course and apron. There is a fresh coat of paint and new lighting and sound systems.

"If you left your house for 10 years unlived in, there would be a lot that you had to do before you invite your friends and family over," Moses said.

Moses has used the tagline "Cup brings the party" to promote NASCAR's superstars racing at the superspeedway for the first time. He's found that it works because the ardent fan understands the significance of Cup racing at the speedway but the casual fan is only familiar with the stars.

He's convinced, though, the market is starved for racing and the chance to see the top names in person.

"People understand that the best drivers in America are in NASCAR and we're bringing them here for the first time in 37 years."

Brohm makes changes on Boilermakers defensive staff

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. — Purdue coach Jeff Brohm revamped his defensive coaching staff in January.

Now he's making more changes.

On Wednesday, Brohm said three of his new hires — Brad Lambert, Ron English and Mark Hagen — all will hold the title of defensive coordinator in addition to their regular positional duties.

Lambert will make the game-day play calls.

"We may give up a big play here or there but we definitely want to be the aggressor," Brohm said. "But we want to go for the win and I feel like we have a good start to that."

The moves come following a dismal 2020 season. Purdue won its first two games then lost its final four, yielding 27 or more points in each.

In December, Brohm fired defensive coordinator Bob Diaco after just one season. He also fired then-defensive coordinator Nick Holt following the 2019 season.

Brohm said a decision has been made about which coaches will be in the press box and which will be on the field though he declined to reveal who would be where.

Lambert will also be in charge of the linebackers, English will coach the secondary, Hagen will coach the defensive line and Jamal Adams, who was hired in April, will coach cornerbacks. The lone holdover is special teams coordinator/defensive assistant Marty Biagi.

Brohm also said former players Justin Sinz and TJ McCollum will move from graduate assistant roles into recruiting positions.

Commissioners dig into CFP expansion plans

BY RALPH D. RUSSO
AP COLLEGE FOOTBALL WRITER

ROSEMONT, Ill. — College Football Playoff expansion took another step forward Friday as the full group of commissioners who manage the postseason system wrapped up two days of digging into a plan for a 12-team format that would revamp the national championship.

The first debate about what the final version of a new playoff will look like has emerged: The Pac-12 is pushing for each Power Five conference to receive an automatic berth.

Expect at lot more negotiating to come.

"This is the beginning of a long, ongoing process," Big 12 Commissioner Bob Bowlsby said as he departed Big Ten headquarters in suburban Chicago. "It's going to be months before we come to any closure on any of this."

There is no announced timeline and the earliest expansion would be possible is 2023 if there are no big snags. Change could be as far out as the 2026 season after the current media rights contract with ESPN expires. The proposal put forth by a subcommittee that included Bowlsby does not address when a new format could be implemented.

"The working group intentionally did not get into it. They wanted to put a proposal in front of the management committee that the committee could consider without having the shackles of trying to figure out when to implement it," CFP Executive Director Bill Hancock said. "The group this week didn't get into implementation time in a significant way. That will come later."

"The first step is determining whether this new format is feasible or something the people on campus want to do," Hancock said.

Last week, the CFP unveiled a plan to expand from four to 12 teams. Six spots would be reserved for the highest-ranked conference champions, but no league would automatically qualify. The other six teams would be chosen at-large from the selection committee's rankings. The plan calls for first-round games on campuses and quarterfinal and semifinal games played in bowls.

The detailed proposal was developed over two years by four members of the CFP management committee: Bowlsby, Southeastern Conference Commissioner Greg Sankey, Notre Dame athletic director Jack Swarbrick and Mountain West Commissioner Craig Thompson.

"You can imagine how many pages of notes I have on two years of work. And that's what we're trying to bring everybody else up to speed with," Bowlsby said.

This week's meeting was the first chance for the entire 11-person management committee to discuss the proposal in person. The other members include the commissioners of the Big Ten, Pac-12, Atlantic Coast Conference, American Athletic Conference, Conference USA, Sun Belt and Mid-American Conference.

"Four of us were at one place. Now I think we have 11 of us at that place," Bowlsby said. "Now, we move to talk to the presidents and see if we can get them at that place."

"The good news is everyone who's on this conference committee supports expansion. So we're aligned on that," said Kliavkoff, who attended the meeting along with outgoing Pac-12 Commissioner Larry Scott.

But the Pac-12 also made clear what it wants in the early going: In a statement, Scott said: "The Pac-12 supports expansion of the CFP and believes that the Autonomy Five champions should annually qualify for the CFP. .... We now look forward to reviewing the expansion proposal more thoroughly with our members, student-athletes, partners and other key stakeholders."

Another part of the plan that still needs to be worked out is how bowls can continue to be incorporated in the playoff. Especially the Rose Bowl, the oldest and most prestigious postseason game that traditionally matches Big Ten and Pac-12 schools in Pasadena, California, on the afternoon of Jan. 1.

"The Rose Bowl hopefully will be part of this," Kliavkoff said. "They are very focused on making sure that their historic time is protected. And continuing to have the relationship they have with the two conferences."

Next week, the group reconvenes in Dallas to present the plan to the CFP's Board of Managers, the university presidents who have final say on what would be a momentous change in college football, with financial ramifications for bowls and conferences alike.

Before anything becomes a done deal, the commissioners want to hear from their local constituents: athletic directors, coaches and players. What do they think about all this?

"This is an enormous undertaking with dozens and dozens of moving parts and it's not going to be a rapid process," Bowlsby said. "This is going to be at least (this) fall before we have the necessary conversations and possess the necessary information to make informed decisions."
